Easter is the springtime of our lives, a time for growth, a time to renew. We hear, daily, the story of the early church and we wonder at the courage of those men and women who, filled with the Holy Spirit, took their faith out into a hostile world, and began to build God's kingdom here in the muck and glory of our world.

The Apostles took the message to the very top; they challenged the leaders of the Jewish faith to examine their actions and repent. Through the simple human act of healing, of compassion for a suffering beggar, they found the whole authority of the Jewish hierarchy descended upon them. Summoned before the highest religious court in the land they stood there, not as frightened fishermen, but as steadfast committed followers of the Lord and challenged their rulers to change and believe in the Good News.

Each time I read the words of John's letters I am struck by his faith in the love of God. Today he reminds us that we are the children of God. That is a truly awesome statement and one that fills us with hope for if God is on our side who can defeat us! It is up to each of us to live out our lives as children of God, this is not an easy task, there will be many obstacles for us to overcome. It is not a matter of saying we are God's children but of being God's children. Are we ready to put Christ and his church first in our lives?

Whenever I hear the passage about the Good Shepherd, I am reminded of one of the first statements of Pope Francis after his accession to the Throne of Peter. He called on his priests to put on the smell of the sheep, to take the burden of caring for the pastoral needs of the flock of Christ on their shoulders. This is not an easy task, through their ordination priests lay down their personal lives and take up the pastoral and spiritual needs of the people they serve. They do this freely. Throughout their priesthood they are faced time and again with decisions which place our needs before theirs. It is a difficult task. but it can be made easier if we are walking with them in the work in caring for the needs of others.
