Seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time

It is hard to believe that God loves everyone. We know there is wickedness in the world, that, all too often lives are lost because of hatred and violence. How do we reconcile the two, love and hatred? We need God's help to turn away from the reaction to condemn, to put an end to retaliation, to find a way of loving the sinner while condemning the sin.

The story of Saul and David is very human, two friends who used to hold each other in great regard but, through circumstance, torn apart by rage and jealousy, far, far from love. Then an opportunity arises for the dispute to end, not in negotiation and agreement, but in the murder of one by the other. David holds the life of Saul in his hands, he only needs to give the word and his troubles, his banishment will end, and the kingdom will be his. He does not hesitate, leaving proof of his power over Saul's life, he turns away, taking Saul's life would be easy, giving it back to him is the harder choice but that is what David must do.

In his letter to the Corinthians Paul compares the human with the divine. Recalling Adam, the first man, Paul speaks of his soul and his earthly nature. He is speaking about us, how our actions create our character, good or bad, we are simply the product of our moral choices. He compares us with Christ, the last Adam, the man born with a life giving spirit whose boundaries are set by His heavenly nature. Somehow, by the life we choose, we can achieve heaven and then we too will become like Christ filled with his life giving spirit.

We are called by Jesus to live a life of compassion and love. No matter what our circumstances or the difficulties and dangers we face we must always try to act as Jesus teaches us. If we do not show love and compassion to others how can we expect the same in return? Each step we take, each choice we make, takes us towards love or towards hate. The greater we love, the greater we will be loved in return.

The Feast of the Chair of St Peter

Every year on 22 February the Church celebrates the continuing role of the Pope, the Vicar of Christ, beginning with St Peter. Around A.D. 34, Peter went to Antioch and established there a seat, or chair, of government. Antioch was a major metropolitan city of the ancient world with a diverse population and was the place where Christ's followers were first called Christians. Peter remained there for seven years, and the Church would acknowledge his work in Antioch by establishing the feast of St Peter's Chair in Antioch, celebrated on Feb. 22 every year. That feast remained on the Catholic liturgical calendar until the 20th century.

Next, Peter went to Rome, the centre of the civilized world. Peter's efforts there would identify him as the first Bishop of Rome. Gifted by God and respected by man, he would continue his role as leader of all the Church, and as a result was the first pope.

On this feast day, the universal Church acknowledges that St Peter was the first pope and that his mission continues through the Holy Father today. Simply stated, that mission is to care for the people of God; to carry on the customs, rituals, teachings and truths of Jesus; and to uphold the unity of His Church. Moreover, the Church proclaims that the authority given to St Peter by Our Lord has been handed down to Peter's successors for the past 2,000 years.

This day is not just about apostolic succession in respect to the pope and the bishops. Among the laity, it symbolizes an unspoken confidence that the Church of Jesus does not change from age to age; that the truths of the Gospel still form the basis of our faith; that these eternal truths are reflected in every Catholic parish and in every Mass. It is a confidence that the leader of our Church adheres to and will never deny the precepts and principles of the Church of Jesus. We firmly believe that we are part of the mystical body of Christ, a holy people, a holy priesthood.
